On any other day of the year, would you hand your child matches or a flaming candle to play with? Probably, a hard NO!

With many 4th of July fireworks shows cancelled because of COVID-19 this year, there's been a big jump in consumer fireworks sold. Lighting fireworks in the backyard or nearby field might seem like a festive and fun way to entertain the kids. However, thousands of people, most often children and teens, are injured each year while using fireworks.

Wave a flag instead of a sparkler and plan on viewing those displays that are going on from a distance. Even if fireworks are legal to purchase and use in your community, they are not safe around children.
